JERSEY COAST TO RIVAL NEWPORT WHEN CAPITAL MOVES

Photos by American Press Association.

1—Interior view of Shadow Lawn. 2—Exterior of new summer capital. 3—Interior view of White House in Washington. 4—Grounds of new 'Summer White House'. 5—View of White House in Washington. 6—A scene on the grounds at Shadow Lawn.

At the announcement by President Wilson that Shadow Lawn as a summer home for himself and his wife those who know the Jersey coast took for something more than the location of the summer capital at Ellerslie. They took for a revival of the old days when Long Branch was Long Branch and the rival of Newport as a social center, with a gateway that the Rhode Island resort never knew.

That every departed many years ago, though the hope eternal of good times to come again has ever been present in the breasts of those who longed for the thirty days and the livelier nights. In the life that the old north coast of Jersey used to know will not come back. There are no Mortimer now to run clubhouses where the limit of play was the roof, nor would public opinion permit them to do business if they were still among the living, but a gayly quiet life, where entertainment will follow entertainment and dance follow dance, is looked for.

To this the coming of the president with his wife is expected to contribute the controlling impulse—a bride in the White House has ever meant a brilliant season—with the influx of diplomat and high government officers, who in other years have gone to the New England coast for their summers, adding their fair share, while scores of well known people whose fathers and grandfathers knew what summer was in that part of the country, but who themselves have been to a great extent strangers there, are expected to renew, in part at least, the family allegiance.

Shadow Lawn, which in itself stands as a monument to the shores of other days, thus becomes the center of the new glories that are to be after years of vicissitudes, in which it passed through several hands and on each was the traditional white couchant.

Many Rooms at Shadow Lawn.

In the White House by the sea, as Shadow Lawn will now be known, the president and his bride will find plenty of room. When the house was built economy of space or money was the last thing thought of, and the result was suit after suit, each one seeming larger than the other. To run it at least a score of houses separate will be necessary—double that number will be more than many if there is much entertaining—while as many more are needed to keep the fifty acres of lawn and shrubs in order, not to mention the work necessary in the garage big enough to accommodate a score of cars. Indeed, the garage building itself is larger than the so-called cottages of many well known New York residents

In that part of New Jersey in the summer months. Surrounded by fifty acres of lawn and nearly thirty other acres under cultivation or improved as a wooded park, the house that is not easily accessible from the outside world. Broad drives wind out to Norwood and Cedar avenues, which bound the property on the east and south, and a box hedge running along the entire place discourages the overcurious passerby. Country shrubs and trees are scattered every where.

The north windows of the house look out on a miniature forest. Although the effect is that of perfect wilderness, each tree has its own course of treatment and trimming mapped out for it. A shaded tennis court, with carpeted seats for spectators, hides behind a clump of maples in the park, and no far away is a roomy outdoor swimming pool. Deep enough at one end for the most adventurous diver and shallow enough at the other for the smallest of kiddies to splash around in, the pool nestles in a grove of overhanging trees so naturally that one half expects to see a deer push its way through the nearby bushes and come down for a drink at its

The three greenhouses, which will eventually furnish decorations for the summer White House, have been enlarged and improved—everything, from ferns, yellow orchids to hasty growth trees, rhodora or holly, as the case may be, under the superintendent's practical hand.

Should the notification committee drop in next summer to tell the president that he is again the choice of the Democratic party, it will first be ushered into the enormous reception hall, measuring 75 by 35 feet. Above the group a glass dome surrounding a central court will catch the breeze. If it is evening, with the beautiful effect of its 250 or more concealed lights.

The bedchamber suits, all with private baths, open on to galleries circling the court on the second and third floors. The wide staircase leads to the mezzanine floor, which, with its grand passages, serves also as a music room. Above this floor is a roof garden, spacious enough to accommodate the entire notification committee and a host of President Wilson's friends besides.

Electricity Will Run Biggest American Battleship

Laying the California's Keel and the Vessel as She Will Appear When Completed.

WORK on the battleship California, the keel of which was recently laid, is progressing well at the Brooklyn navy yard. The California has been designed with an eye to the adapting of all modern improvements in vessels of war and will be one of the three battleships which will be the largest and most effective ever built for the navy and will rank favorably with the great superdreadnaughts of European design. The California's keel laying has ever created the interest in this country that attaches to the recent ceremony. The California tenor of his remarks indicated that the government would obey the will of the people.

For the first time Secretary Daniels told the story of the great ship-dreadnaught that is to be. "The vessel," he said, "to which electricity has been put are well high countries, but it seems significant that electric propulsion for the modern battleship is first to be installed upon the splendid monster whose keel we have just laid. The electric drive is one of the latest results of the progress in the utilization of electric force. It is a source of pride that the American navy is facilitating the movement for its use upon battleships."

It may be said that the battleship California represents one of the greatest advances in modern marine engineering. Electric propulsion has been widely discussed in all countries for several years, but the United States is the only nation which has not past the discussion stage. For two years and a half the 28,000-ton cruiser Jupiter has been using the only electrical high power marine installation afloat.

The California is the logical outcome of the department's experiments on the Jupiter, and she will be the first battleship in the world to be propelled by electricity. The combination of the electric drive and oil fuel will enable her, at ten knots speed—the speed always calculated by navy experts for endurance—to steam for nine days longer than a coal burning dreadnaught. In other words, the California will be able to steam nearly twice as far as the Wyoming or Arkansas.

Her sister ships, the new Mississippi and Alaska, building at Newport News and Camden respectively, will share with the California a record of being the largest battleships yet built or building for our navy. The limit of cost of each of these men-of-war is $15,000,000, while the actual contract prices of the three vessels show a considerable saving from these figures. The California completed will represent an outlay of about $11,000,000.

"The fourteen inch guns which she is to mount, having extreme range and greater striking power than any naval gun now in use, offer the advantage of allowing the mounting of twelve of them on a single ship as against eight guns of the fifteen inch type which have been adopted by some other navies."

"With a length over all of 624 feet, a length on water line of 560 feet and extreme breadth of 97 feet 4 1/2 inches, with a displacement of 21,000 tons and a speed of twenty-one knots, and with an armament, in addition to her twelve four-inch high powered guns in four turrets, a secondary armament of sixteen 12-inch five-inch rapid fire guns, and four submerged torpedo tubes capable of firing the largest type of torpedoes, she will be one of the most formidable ships of war afloat."

Of What Use is a Music Room?

NO, it's not putting on airs to have a music room. It is the most sane of inventions. For, when the place, for instance, is empty to any one, it is annoying indeed. And a music room makes a position for the musician to entertain himself or his friends undisturbed and undisturbed!

Wandering from the pool down one of the many sequestered paths, the president and his wife, on their first tour of inspection, will eventually find their way to the picturesque old well, with its pointed thatched covering, a relic of the days when the estate was a private farm. Sheltered by clumps of evergreens and shadowed by tall maples, the well, with its rustic platform, cannot be seen from the house or the street. It is an ideal retreat from the bustle of state or the burdens of society, or both.

BORDEN.

Who saw A. Flumme at Medicine Hat? Is the guessing pool over, or what's coming off. August has bought a new piano, which has set us all wondering. He says it is deep for us. Let us all work together and plan this out.

Word has been received from Mrs. Austin and daughters and B. Herring, 1st, of their safe arrival at Spokane.

Mrs. Herington is receiving a visit from her sister of Alton.

Borden school is progressing fine, with Miss M. Stokely as principal. Quite a number of the children are carrying black and blue spots—through off playing—nothing else.

Borden has lost out in the Bow Island post-office.

Mrs. John Lay, who has been in the sick list for a week, is around again. Bob Howard is hauling wheat.

M. C. Herington and R. O. Cannon are snatching glances for the 1910 contest at Bow Island.

Leon Connor and Grant Ambrose are spending a few days at Minneapolis.

Do you know how to wrestle? Will match A. Mitchell and Loyd Garrison, who gave a fine exhibition at the schoolhouse recently.

Threshing is all finished at Borden.

John Andre has purchased a new car.

J. Peterson has finished all his threshing. He's a fellow who is worth in worth publishing five bushels to the acre, what 62, out-111, and barley 82 bushels.

Just as we are to print, we learn of a very narrow escape that J. Fortune had between here and Medicine Hat.

While underneath his car the chains caught his coat and started to draw him towards the main spring of his car. The car was only saved from a very serious accident by his coat falling away under the strain.

If there's any news this week from Haycroft, you shall know who wrote it. It's just to get even with Borden.
